

Everyday Activism: Bios

Everyday Activism: New Lens for Howard County Everyday Activism: A Facilitator's Training Facilitator: Suzanne Haley

Suzanne Haley works to inspire soul-care and human solidarity through compassionate truth sharing, awakening empathy, and activating courageous citizenship. She is the Founder & CEO of S. Haley & Associates, and Co-founder of Changing the Lens, a community-building movement created to dismantle internalized and systemic racism. She participates with task forces, alliances, committees, and diverse collaborative efforts to inspire, educate, request, and demand both equity and justice. She also works with local, regional, national, and international faith-based organizations to inspire collective alliances for racial justice and healing through community building. She hopes to stimulate inside-out change that will bridge the gap of indifference and make a difference in the larger worlds of work, faith, community, and society.

Everyday Activism: New Lens for Howard County Guest Presenter Justin W. Morgan

Justin Morgan is a doctoral candidate at the Harvard T.H. Chan School of Public Health, and a Health Policy Research Scholar with the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation. His research interests include participatory research and the role of power and politics in shaping health equity. He has worked previously as a research associate in the Health Policy Center at the Urban Institute, and received his B.S. in Public Health from American University. Prior to university, Justin was raised in Ellicott City, and attended Mount Hebron High School.

